Teak Wood Furniture

For centuries teak has been known for its high quality, durability, and beauty. Genuine Teak is a hardwood tree found in countries of Southeast Asia such as Indonesia. Teak is very hard, densely grained wood with high oil content. These characteristics make teak furniture naturally resistant to moisture, rot, warping, shrinking, splintering, insects and fungus, making it ideal for outdoor use.

At Fran's, our Indonesian factories use only Grade A, government managed, plantation grown teak. The construction of our Teak furniture follows the traditional method of mortise and tenon construction and is assembled with wood dowel joints. You are sure to get years of trouble free use from any of your teak selections at Fran's.

EDUCATED BUYER INFORMATION

Quality Construction

Leading wicker and rattan importers, such as "Fran's", have their furniture fully assembled at the factory by skilled craftsmen with many years of experience. This quality is most visible at the joints where the front and side sections meet. Image A. At "Fran's" all joints are glued, screwed together, then for added strength and a stylish finished look the joints are bound with peel rattan.

Image B. To save money on freight some manufacturers import their furniture in sections then assemble these sections using nails giving an illusion that they are bound together. When you look closely you can see a space between these sections (see arrows). This poor assembly results in arms that are weak and very shaky. As you can see, no shortcuts are taken at "Fran's". We pay careful attention to every detail assuring you beautiful, durable and comfortable furniture for many years of enjoyment.

FAN MAGAZINE RACK
